

500 Lottah Road, Goulds Country

Off-grid hilltop getaway with views, pasture, bush and permanent water

If your heart is yearning for an off-grid country getaway in a stunning location, then I've found just the property for you. Built with no detail left to chance, from double glazed windows, open plan living and future terraced garden locations, this property is an opportunity to escape to a beautiful pocket of Tasmania to be truly self-sufficient without compromising on comfort.

You'll wake to a stunning view over your property to the neighbouring valleys and hills. You'll share the land with some of Tasmania's iconic wildlife and have your own private wildlife reserve to explore with forests of tree-ferns, creeks and tall timbers. The property has two spring-fed dams and a water race that is the source of water for dairy farms below, as it runs through one of your dams, ensuring constant water supply for your property. The Ransom River punctuates the northern boundary and is a very special feature to have on your country estate.

The shed is currently not council approved, but it has been built to exacting standards, allowing the new owners to complete the build
