THE LIFESTYLE...

Bellerive continues to be one of the Eastern Shore's most tightly held suburbs for a reason.

You're close to the beach, great schools, local cafes, parks, walking tracks and the famous Bellerive waterfront.

And when you need to get into the city, Hobart CBD is only a short drive away.

For families, the location is incredibly convenient.

For investors, the suburb's long-term demand continues to make it a very safe bet.

THE OPPORTUNITY...

Homes like this don't appear very often.

A first time offered property in a tightly held Bellerive street is the kind of opportunity buyers wait years for.

Whether you choose to move straight in, renovate over time, or simply enjoy the solid construction and character that homes of this era are known for, this is a property with genuine long-term appeal.

And once you see the view in person, you'll understand exactly why the owners stayed here for so long.

Also worth noting... homes built in the 1950's tend to be solid as a rock.

Which is good news for buyers.

And slightly frustrating for real estate agents who prefer houses that fall over quickly so we can sell them again.
