

19 Bunbury Street, Collie

Big Block, Big Shed, Big Potential

Set behind a charming red picket fence, 19 Bunbury Street, Collie is the kind of home that instantly feels familiar. It has the character, the size and the old school block that so many buyers are searching for a property with room to move, room to store, and room to make your mark.

From the street, the home has a warm country feel with its cream weatherboard style exterior, red roofline, solar panels and cottage style front garden. Step inside and you will find a floorplan that offers more space than first expected, with large bedrooms, a central kitchen, separate living areas and a generous family room that opens out toward the rear alfresco area.

The bedrooms are a standout, particularly for buyers who are tired of modern homes with compact rooms. Each space has the kind of proportions that allow for real flexibility, whether you need family bedrooms, a home office, hobby space or somewhere to create a comfortable retreat.

At the heart of the home, the kitchen connects well with the dining and living areas, allowing the main spaces to flow together while future plans take shape. There is no pretending this home is brand new; it would benefit from attention, updating and a buyer with vision, but what it offers is space, structure, land and opportunity in a way that is becoming harder to find.

Out the back, the property really begins to show its value. The large block provides plenty of breathing room, while rear access adds another layer of practicality for extra vehicles, trailers, caravan or work gear.

The workshop is a major bonus, offering excellent space for storage, tools, projects or secure parking. Together with the alfresco area, multiple carport spaces and generous overall site, it gives the property the kind of flexibility that is hard to find.

This is not a cookie cutter property. It is a home with history, character and honest potential, suited to a buyer who can see beyond the current presentation and recognize the value in a big block, a large home, great access and serious shed space.
