

Wulguru, 14 Dahl Crescent

This home is something special!

From the street, you wouldn't even know this home was here, and that's exactly how it was designed.

Hidden away from prying eyes, the driveway winds up toward a breathtaking reveal, on the left is a sprawling pool and entertaining area, carved into the hillside like a secret retreat. It's the kind of space that immediately makes you pause, take in the views, and imagine summer afternoons spent here with friends and family.

Heading up the stairs from the pool area, you step into the front yard, but it doesn't feel like a typical yard. It's a thoughtfully curated space for relaxation and unwinding. There's a gazebo, perfectly positioned for sunrise coffees or evening wine as the city lights of Townsville shimmer below. A hanging chair swings gently, inviting you to settle in and let the world fade away. Up here, it's easy to feel like you've escaped it all.

From the garden, the front doors lead you into the heart of the home. The first thing you notice is that Every room is angled to take in the views. Straight ahead is the main lounge room, where the layout of the home starts to unfold. To the right, there's another lounge room-a cozy space perfect for quiet nights-and a study that's sure to inspire productivity with its breathtaking outlook.

To the left, you'll find the dining room and a third lounge area, all drenched in natural light and framed by those same incredible views.

The kitchen sits at the center of it all, a striking combination of white stone benchtops and rich wooden cabinetry. It's large, functional, and inviting, with plenty of storage for the busiest of households. From here, you can easily keep an eye on the action, but the real magic lies outside. A door on the ground floor opens to the small rear patio, where the hillside backyard becomes part of the home's charm. It's a private, natural escape-no landscaping required.

When it's time to head upstairs, the internal staircase takes you to the second level, where four spacious bedrooms await. Each room feels like its own retreat, with large windows that frame the views and split-system air conditioners to keep things comfortable year-round.

The main bedroom is something else entirely-double the size of most mains, with ocean views stretching from Magnetic Island to Cleveland Bay to the front, and back up the hill to the rear. It's a space that feels both luxurious and deeply personal, a room you'll never want to leave.

The upstairs bathroom is cleverly designed, with access from the main bedroom for added convenience. Meanwhile, fresh carpets and a new coat of paint throughout the home mean all the hard work has been done-you just need to move in and enjoy.

This isn't just a house; it's a carefully crafted sanctuary where privacy, design, and nature come together effortlessly. Whether you're relaxing by the pool, watching the city lights from the gazebo, or waking up to the ocean views, this home has a way of making every moment feel special.
