system. Cattle trading also forms part of the operation, with the property having run up to approximately 200 head of cattle.

Cropping provides further versatility, with approximately 100 hectares historically utilised for cereal crops including barley and ryecorn. The property has also grown up to approximately 120 hectares of lucerne, alongside greenfeed, fodder crops and pasture rotations. This combination provides flexibility across the farming calendar and a range of feed production options.

Water is supplied through two separate schemes, with the Hakataramea Water Scheme providing the property's tank water allocation, totalling 16 units, while Padkins supplies the race water throughout the property. Natural springs and waterways provide additional water sources in other areas. The farm is currently operated as a dryland unit, with no existing irrigation infrastructure.

The farm improvements are a real feature, providing an extensive range of facilities to support the scale of the operation. These include multiple implement and hay sheds, grain storage, five 45-tonne silos, workshops and additional woolshed facilities.

A particular highlight is the substantial sheep-handling complex, featuring an approximately 298m2 internal shearing shed and approximately 782m² of covered yards. The five-stand shearing facility is complemented by a kitchen, separate toilet and shower facilities, creating a practical and well-appointed working environment. The covered yards provide excellent space for handling and managing stock, with a Racewell Auto Draft sheep handling and weighing system adding further efficiency to the operation.

Accommodation is provided by two residences, including a substantial five-bedroom homestead of approximately 295m², featuring two bathrooms, an office and established grounds with a tennis court. A separate three-bedroom cottage provides additional accommodation for staff or extended family.

Belfield Farm is also supported by a current NZFAP+ Farm Plan audited to Gold Star level and is a Silver Fern supplier farm.

Combining scale, established infrastructure, a proven farming system and versatile land use options, Belfield Farm represents an outstanding opportunity for farming families, established operators or those looking to secure a significant South Canterbury rural holding.
